THE BARN AND THE HORSE

From a petition being circulated in Ohio under sponsorship of Labor's Non-Partisan league, which seeks to rebuke Sen. Donahay for not supporting the President's court packing bill, these words are taken: "the people... are tired of the judicial dictatorship hitherto being exercised and now being exercised by the courts, particularly the supreme court..."

This is a political phrase for describing the Roosevelt administration's angry resentment of the court's unfavorable opinions on certain new laws. Use of the argument by a labor organization implies a curious faith in politicians for this reason.

Politicians are variable. They win and lose elections. In a few years, a reaction against New Deal reforms might crowd congress with politicians who would be unsympathetic to labor. It might put into the White House a president they could not trust.

Such a congress and such a president might cooperate to pass laws which would be unfavorable to labor's interests. But, granted a supreme court with its power of review undiminished, labor's interests still would be protected against sudden attack just as the rights of states have been protected by recent judicial decisions. Politicians find it impossible to swim against the tide; judges can and, to their greater glory, frequently do.

There are two sides to the question of checks and balances in government. The "judicial dictatorship" to which the administration objects, not always so strenuously as some of its supporters, however, has taught Americans more about the meaning of constitutional government than they ever knew before. It would be a great pity if in the hour when they are discovering what it means to govern themselves under their Constitution they were to be persuaded by excited leadership to burn down the barn to get the horse out.

IMPORTANT HISTORY

Convincing two to one approval by Jones & Laughlin employees of SWOC as an exclusive collective bargaining agency undoubtedly will give impetus to CIO's organizing campaign in the steel industry. The bandwagon psychology is as important in lining up union members as it is in lining up voters.

The Jones & Laughlin election does not close the issue of exclusive bargaining rights under written agreements, though it may be expected to have an effect on the ultimate outcome. Other independent companies which are not willing to make written agreements, even without exclusive bargaining rights, may be expected to play out the string on the approach they have chosen.

Claiming that a majority of their employees do not want to be represented by SWOC unions and that those who do support these unions are not entitled to written agreements under the labor relations act, other independents have indicated they will stand by their convictions even at the expense of a strike. There is nothing to prevent them from doing so; there is no law which compels an employer to sign an agreement.

The significance of the Jones & Laughlin election is that one company, confronted with the choice between a strike and an election to determine whether its employees wanted to be represented exclusively by SWOC, chose an election. This is something in the handling of labor relationships which idealists have demanded for years. The ultimate outcome of the new method still is problematic, but no one can doubt that important history has been made in America's first large industrial election.

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, May 24—Diary: Up, feeling sloppy, but cheered by hails from Jacob Ruppert, Sheila Barrett, Alice Brady and the lovable, rowdy Ted Healy. Also a long letter from Tom Geraghty telling the news of London, cock-a-hoop with lilted phrases about the charm of some ancient streets. And the coronation.

So with my lady to Glenhead to the wedding reception for the T. Dennis Boardmans. And back to The City to meet J. Bryan III, who has been assigned to write a piece about me for the Saturday Evening Post. Then talking to V. V. McNitt about syndicate matters and such.

Dined at a Schrafft's and so intrigued by a mustache fixer with a hand mirror at the next table ate only a few dabs. Afterward across 42d street and saw the darkened burlesque houses, and stopped in to hear a bare-chested Sampson in a leopard's skin lecture on the marvels of his cure-all.

From the harmonica king, Larry Adler, in Oxford, England: "I notice in your column you would like to play the harmonica as I do. The co-incidence is spooky. My life ambition is to be a columnist such as you. Just last week I said that very thing to A. Christiansen, young editor of the London Daily Express who lets me write a column for him now and then. If you are wondering how I come to read your column here in Oxford, let me tell you my girl friend sends me your entire output, including the Cosmopolitan. Anyway, I'll send you one of my mouth organs and all instructions, if you'll give me a leg up on columning. I'll guarantee to have you tooting 'Blue Danube' in nothing flat. But why should you make such an exchange? Anybody—an urchin in the street—can play a mouth organ." (Ed. note: But not like a Larry Adler, and there are not a half dozen readable columnists.)

And last of the roaming violinists who wander from table to table in cafes seems to be Joe Fejer—pronounced Fayre—who is still strolling. He has roamed from old Delmonico's on the avenue to a Hungarian goulasherie on Second avenue. A smiling, unctuous troubador, he knows a thousand and one arias and likes to stand before you, swaying, dream-eyed and playing on and on. Nothing gives him greater happiness than to find a group of listeners who will hear him until dawn.

That testimonial dinner to Broadway's "grandest guy," Gene Buck, was a rousing bravura. As the cow hands say on the Texas pampas they "poured it on him" and deservedly. With the exception of former President Hoover's well balanced restraint and Bud Kelland's deep-seated satire—the razor sort that would cut floating silk—the complimentary goo of a score of celebrities had almost engulfed the genial Gene in a burlesque of bathos. The former secretary of President Wilson, white haired Joseph P. Tumulty, had presided and did not spare the sugar. So little did he refrain from an extravaganza of acclaim that as the guests left Grantland Rice, a bit groggy, whispered to Arthur McKeogh: "Well the shouting and tumult dies!"

Coronation crowds are coming back humming "Let's Have a Tiddly on the Milk Bar." One hears it everywhere in England—on the radio and among the whistling errand boys and cabaret crooners. London, it seems, has all of a sudden taken up milk just as the orange drink stands niched in every available building crevice in New York. Incidentally a new American restaurant has sprung up in London next door to the old Palladium and is called "Ye Old Doughnut Dunkery."

Jigsaw genesis: Harry Lauder postcards that the jigsaw puzzle was invented by a Scot butcher who inadvertently dropped a pound note in his mincing machine.

Churchill's famous old restaurant corner on Broadway at 49th street, leveled by the wreckers, is being graced by a swanky movie house to be run on the two-day basis. For several years it has been deserted and was slowly becoming one of the familiar eye sores. Churchill's "cartoonist table" was once as important in its way as the old Amen Corner in the 5th Avenue Hotel.

Bagatelles: Clare Diggins, the cartoonist, is gyping from the Golden Gate to Maine in an old trailer... Michael Arien has fallen for the monochrome... Hollywood's Dutch Treat club is called the Scotch Treat... Alfred Lunt has a green and yellow striped shirt with collar to match that Lynn Fontanne will not let him wear... Gene Aherne, the cartoonist, is building a Spanish castle with a patio in California... Abel Green and his wife are on a two months' trip to California to look over the Variety interest on the coast.

THE STARS SAY :

For Tuesday, May 25

A day of excellent promise is forecast from the dominant lunar and mutual configurations of major planets. With the unsealing of old crystallizations and limitations definite advancement should be made in the affairs, with business making strides, real possessions increasing and the financial status becoming stabilized.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared to push forward for a year of progress and stability, in which much of future achievement and solidity are dependent. There should be a definite reorganization of confused and stagnant conditions, to be followed by increased finances, accumulated real possessions and safe investments, in all of which employers, influential persons and elderly friends or powerful institutions may be counted upon for substantial endorsement.

A child born on this day may be serious, responsible, ambitious and progressive, inspiring the confidence and support of its elders and those in authority and influence.

Child Health

WHEN I WROTE this article, I happened to glance at a picture of President Roosevelt signing the Congressional Act, designating May 1 as "National Child Health Day." Here is one measure that no court would veto, and the thing it symbolizes will be applauded by every citizen.

Greater attention than ever was given to the publicity of this year's May Day. The Child Welfare League of America sponsored a "Master Broadcast Luncheon" in New York City. On the same day, there were local demonstrations in all the popular centers of America.

Personally, I felt enthused to think the whole country was thinking about health protection for children.

Can you possibly call to mind anything more important? Every body in the world is interested in at least one child. It may be you are centering your affections on your own child, or your grandchild, or your god-child.

But what about the poor, little, neglected child—the waif, or the unwanted? What about that child?

Disease Undermines Nation
No child in America is safe in good health, unless every other child in America is in good health. Many of the serious ailments of children are the infectious diseases. When these diseases thrive in a community, every youngster is in danger.

But I have in mind not alone the direct physical effects of acute diseases, but also the indirect effects of ill health upon the behavior of the child. Right thinking, straight thinking, is almost impossible in a child whose health is impaired by chronic disease. Mental and moral degeneracy is traced to physical disability.

Society at large is interested in the health of the children. The economic and social waste of disease, plus the cost of delinquency and crime—these two evils combined make up America's greatest problem.

The protection of child health means the protection of older groups, and ultimately a more energetic and physically fit citizen. The child of today is the adult of tomorrow. Beginning with the babies and continuing our efforts at health protection through the school years, we will be rewarded, not alone by immediate results, but by a better nation. Length of days and freedom from disease will be added to our blessings.

"Rich Cargoes" by Henry C. Rowland

CHAPTER XIII

It was a stage luncheon. A scene in which actors of ordinary antecedents are cast for the parts of the Continental countess, the famous painter and sportsman, the aristocratic but unregenerate son of the noble earl and his presumptuous featherheaded but well-born wife, the daughter of impoverished nobility perhaps, and compelled by family urgencies to make the best of a bad job.

That was it. Sandy felt that he had completely encircled the idea and having done this, he proceeded silently to absorb what he had got. The analogy he felt to be exact. These people were acting parts of characters that they were not, had been doing so right along and playing their roles extremely well. But their dramatization was that of actors who the lower classes and even therefore no actual background of good breeding, no innate elegance to draw from. One feels this on the stage at times, that the whole scene, the different roles do not ring true, and Sandy got it now.

He got more, that they were growing weary of their parts, of the tension of the situation was making these more difficult. Slight lapses became more frequent slips and vulgarisms that were not indicatives got past.

But this, Sandy reflected, should be whatever their moral fiber, the associations of the Colonel's children must have been of the best. He himself rang true, supported 'tis the case of Grand Seigneur. The Colonel would have seen to it that his children's early associations in school and out were never vulgar, whatever their morals.

Vinckers, as the son of an old New Amsterdam Dutch family, might have become a wrong one in his mocking about the world, but good birth and breeding would still have been in evidence, and he could scarcely have sunk to attempted assassination. Flavia, distinctly pretty and of well rounded shape, must have probably been on the stage at some time. Sandy thought, her voice, inflections and mannerisms seemed artificial, did not ring true! As the most colorless of the four her antecedents would be the hardest to place. She might be the bad girl of a good family or the good girl of a bad one. It was impossible to tell about a young woman like that, caught up in a momentary mood. One thing alone was evident, that her upbringing and associations had not been aristocratic.

A suspicion held previously in solution became now a precipitate in Sandy's mind. These four people were impostors. They were not at all what the Colonel had described them to be. Hester was not his daughter, nor was Jarvis his son. Vinckers could not possibly be the portrait painter of that name, nor was Flavia genuine. They were a mob of frauds, a mob of crooks perhaps come there for purposes of blackmail and extortion. They might be worse, dangerous criminals of international activities. Certainly Vinckers had revealed himself a potential assassin.

Sandy felt sick. The query that came on this revelation was more disturbing than the discovery itself. How much did Isobel know about them? Was she aware of the true character or rather the lack of true character of these people? Sandy was sure that there had been no question in her mind of the identities assumed on their arrival, or her previous contacts with them. But he felt now that she had penetrated the disguise even earlier than he had done and that she had procured from her uncle the admission that they were frauds.

Dinner was finished smoothly enough and they went out onto the terrace for coffee. Sandy led Isobel to the end of the terrace, a concrete structure awninged f of a space by the big door, and with a parapet supported by moulded pillars.

"The actors in this farce are more distinct," he said, "but the plot still obscure." As he spoke there came from somewhere back in the trees a soft but heavy sound, like a muffled padding. Sandy peered in that direction and it seemed to him some moving opacity bulked up against the darker background.

"What's that?" Sandy asked.

"I've sent Mike on Mouse to tell Uncle what happened a little while ago."

"That the pig-dog had snapped?"

"Yes. I heard that shot. I know what it was."

"What else do you know, Isobel?"

"What you learned tonight at dinner. I saw it in your face."

"It's not your fault. How long have you known that they were frauds?—a band of crooks?"

"I began to think something was wrong when Uncle disappeared. Vinckers had been missing. He came in just after Mouse got back and my first thought was that he'd followed Uncle and murdered him. Then from the way they took it, I began to get the right of it. Hester and Jarvis are no more his son and daughter than they are yours. Uncle is a gentleman whatever else he may or may not have been. They are scum—canaille. Especially Jarvis. Hester shows some signs of breeding. I'm horribly worried about you, Sandy."

"You needn't be. I've spiked his guns. Let's string along with them until we learn just what their game may be."

They strolled back to where the others were seated. Vinckers was discussing the Colonel's forecasts of the development of the Bahamas.

"Not so lousy as one might think," he said. "For semitropical climate this is hard to beat. Got Florida faded and money could do anything with these cays and islands. It's merely a question of transportation and air craft is solving that for such localities as this just as automobiles opened up the hinterland for big private estates. The Colonel has vision. We've got to hand him that."

"Has he had?" Sandy asked.

"Oh, come," Vinckers said, "what's the use of stalling? We all know he's not drowned or shark bait."

"It would serve him jolly well right," said Jarvis in the affected drawl that was sometimes attenuated to a Cockney whine. "If we shot his blooming elephant."

"That," said Isobel, "would take quite a lot of shooting. Her voice was hard, metallic."

"Oh, come," Jarvis said, "one bullet in the right place would do the trick."

"Quite true," Isobel retorted. "For Mouse."

The implication was obvious, that other bullets would be finding marks were such an act attempted. Isobel went on evenly. "That's the sort of thing you'd do, Jarvis. But let me tell you that you'd take less of a chance to walk into the middle of a wild herd and start potting."

"Just what do you mean, Cousin dear?"

"She means," Sandy said quietly, "that no such act would be permitted. Isobel is mistress here and while her servants have seen fit to decamp for some silly reason I've got a perfectly good crew to carry on her orders."

"Oh, let's not wrangle," Hester said. She raised her beautiful bare arms. "Family rows are always the worst. This is going to work out all right, children. I'm going to bed. It has been a hectic day and night. Come on Vinck. You look all in

THEATER Attractions

Tonight's and Tuesday's programs at the theaters list "The Prince and the Pauper" at the State and a double bill, "Racketeers in Exile" and "Country Gentlemen," at the Grand.

George Bancroft has the lead in "Racketeers in Exile," playing the part of a gangster who reforms and launches an attack on his former associates. Evelyn Venable and Wynne Gibson have the feminine leads.

Become Real Thing

Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson have Joyce Compton and Lila Lee as costars in their picture, "Country Gentlemen," in which they are seen as stock promoters, whose fake projects turn out to be real.

The story of a childish prank that almost changed the history of a nation is the theme of "The Prince and the Pauper," which, according to Mark Twain, author of the well-known story from which the picture has been made, is one of those things "that might have happened."

It is the tale of two boy babies born in London at the same moment in the 16th century—one being Prince Edward, son of Henry VIII and heir to the throne; the other, Tom Canty, brat of a ruffian and thief. Some years after the opening of the story the youngsters, who resemble each other strongly, meet.

They change clothes and find that the beggar boy is now the prince and the prince a dirty, tattered wail.

Twins Make It Success

"The Prince and the Pauper" was a great novel; it became a great stage play, and now it has reached top heights as a movie. Much of the merit of the picture version is due to the amazing performances of the two youngsters who play the title roles, Bobby and Billy Mauch. Bobby, who plays the Prince, makes his screen debut in the film. Billy played the child Anthony Adverse in the picture of that name and later was Penrod in "Penrod and Sam."

Errol Flynn—of "Green Light," "Captain Blood" and "Charge of the Light Brigade" fame—is starred with the youngsters. In the cast also are such players as Claude Rains, Henry Stephenson, Barton MacLane, Alan Hale, Eric Portman, Montagu Love, and Sam.

Autos Must Be Kept Mechanically Safe To Meet Today's Traffic Hazards

HARRIS GARAGE & STORAGE CO. QUARTERS—MODERN IN EVERY RESPECT

The very appearance of the Harris Garage & Storage Co. plant on West State st., bespeaks the efficiency for which the company has been known for years.

In the accompanying photos, several of the varied departments, which go to make the garage one of the most modern in eastern Ohio, are pictured. At the upper left is seen the entrance to the service department. At the right of the large door is the lubricating and testing department where modern mechanism is the rule for every operation. Cleanliness and neatness are apparent. At the left of the entrance are seen the windows of the parts department, always kept well stocked.

At the right, above, in the picture is the used car department, all cars from this department being sold with the Harris guarantee of satisfaction.

At the left, below, is the Harris new car showroom, neat as a pin, kept as spic and span as the products it shows to such good advantage. The Harris company is agent here for the DeSoto and Plymouth. A sub-agency, the Quaker Motor Sales, on East Pershing st., sells the Packard.

TOLL GROWING, FIGURES SHOW

Time to Test Car Is Before It Goes Onto the Highway

When you are traveling the crowded highways of today—with cars ahead of you, cars behind you, whizzing by from the opposite direction, turning off the road and onto the road; red lights to watch, green lights to watch, reckless drivers to avoid; the rasping of gears, the creaking of tires, the squealing of brakes and the throb of engines constantly and unmercifully assailing your ears—it is not the time to go into a deep, thoughtful reverie concerning the mechanical operation of your car—whether the lights are right, the brakes safe, the tail and stop lights burning and countless other things doing what they're made to do.

The time for that is before you take to the road. Only a few minutes are required. Inspection completed, you may concentrate on the matter of driving safely.

Inspection via "Safety Lane" at the E. L. Grate Motor Co., garage, S. Ellsworth ave., is thorough and mechanically accurate. If your car comes through with an O. K., you know it's safe.

Traffic deaths in January and February totaled 5,500—or 1,050 more than in the corresponding months of 1936, according to National Safety council figures, in spite of the fact that both January and February were good driving months, lacking the snow and cold and winter hazards of a year ago.

During the year there were over 12,000 more deaths and 197,000 more accidents at night than might logically have been expected on a traffic exposure basis.

Good lights is one means of reducing this toll. "Safety Lane" electric eye, which corrects lighting faults to the minutest point, is one of the varied testing features to be found at Grate's.

CLEANLINESS IS AID TO BEAUTY

Well Cared for Clothing Is Required by Today's Standards

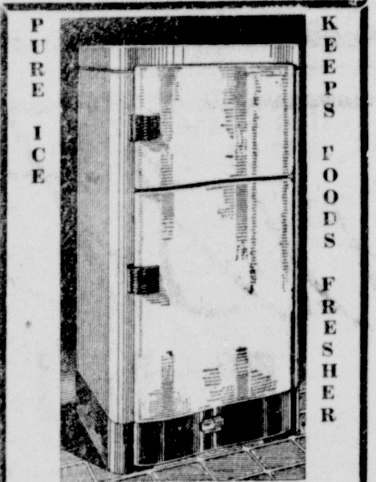

Good looks can't be put on superficially before a mirror. The elusive quality that makes a girl easy on the eyes must begin with a clean, healthy body, and progress naturally from the skin out.

Today's beauty requirements are measured in terms of such things as clear skin, sound teeth, shining hair, well-cared-for hands, and eyes that reflect good spirits and good health. Clean stockings, gloves, powder puffs, and underwear are all ace-high attributes.

There's no denying that pretty clothes help to adorn girlish beauty. They need not be expensive, but they must be kept clean. Party gowns in particular are so constructed they are easily pulled out of shape, and to clean them only a dry cleaner with proper equipment and knowledge should be considered.

At the Paris Cleaners, all such garments are measured on a special panel when received, and again when ready to return to the customer. Special care is taken in spotting; no rings or discolorations spots ever greet the owner.

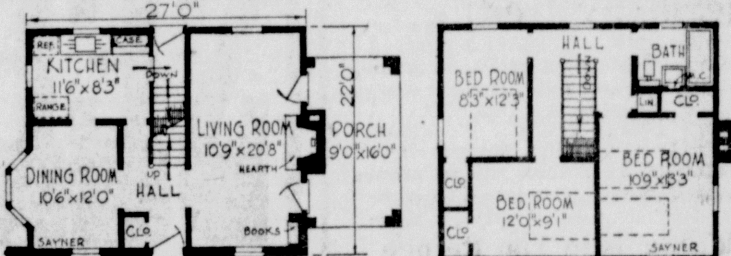

With the many fabrics now on the market, the cost of proper cleaning equipment is beyond the reach of most establishments, but L. C. Price of the Paris Cleaners has kept abreast of the times.

Beauty, Utility In This Colonial

The Sayner is a Colonial home that bespeaks much pleasing hospitality and is a monument to the common sense of the American home builder. It is one of the most popular plans and justifiably so because it is expertly designed and economical to build.

The porch at the side may be enclosed. The first story wall only is of brick, painted white. All rooms are large, fully equipped and provided with maximum light and ventilation.

Believe it or not, this can be yours for only $50.09 a month. This figure includes all interest, charges, taxes and insurance, the whole amount being paid in one sum, simply like rent. The People's Lumber Co. can give you full details.

Urges Encouragement For Child In Musical Education

F. J. (Pat) Conway, who has been instructor of band instruments at the Finley School of Music, 132 S. Broadway, for six years, states that if a child has a great desire to play some special instrument, it is usually best to let him have his choice. As to the wind and brass instruments, there are certain types of teeth and lips that make the playing of these instruments much more natural than do other types.

Tone Test Advised

"Before purchasing such an instrument one should have the child take a tone test and with years of experience in teaching, we are in a position to give an opinion as to his chances for success. Above all, one should not be deceived by the old saying, 'He can't carry a tune, so it's no use for him to study music.'"

"Many children do not sing in tune because they have had no ear training and their perception of pitch is faulty because it has not been aroused and developed. Careful training will do wonders."

"There are certain signs which point toward some special aptitude for music, and any mother may watch for and discover these for herself. If the child asks for lessons, one should not meet this request with doubting references to possible neglected practice and the slender chances of his continuing definite study."

"Instead, his willingness to begin should be welcomed. If the child is given a fair trial, combined with the new modern teaching methods which keep the child's interest intact, wonderful progress can be made and with the school band and community band work a still greater interest leads the child on to greater success. Give the child a good start and he will make a good finish."

Every Child's Right

"It is every child's right to have some musical training. It is one path to joy and happiness toward which one should not fail to direct their child's attention. Some day the child who perhaps started reluctantly down its unfamiliar way will look back from unexpected heights and thank you."

The Finley Music Co. has made it possible through their musical advancement plan for every girl and boy to study their favorite instrument at a very small weekly charge which includes private lessons, and when their course is completed, the instrument they have chosen becomes their personal property.

F. J. (Pat) Conway

"The Finley Music Co. welcomes the opportunity to talk over the plan with you on the future study of music for your child."

Kansas City Batters Uncork Three Homers In One Inning

CHICAGO, May 24.—It took the Kansas City Blues some time to get their long range artillery unlimbered, but apparently it's ready for heavy duty now.

The Blues set what is believed to be an American Association mark yesterday in defeating Toledo 13 to 10 after losing 6 to 3 in the first game of a double bill. The Blues knocked out three home runs in one inning, the seventh, when Jim Oglesby, Al Marchand and Pinch-Hitter Stumpf hit for the circuit. Toledo scored five runs in the third to win the first game as Joe Sullivan pitched steady, nine-hit ball.

Milwaukee, champions in 1936 and current leaders, ran into trouble at Columbus, dropping two games to the scrappy Red Birds. Max Lanier allowed the Brewers only one earned run as the Birds took the first tilt, 7 to 1, with a 15-hit attack. After Milwaukee had piled up a lead in the first five frames of the nightcap, Columbus chased Al Milnar off the hill in the seventh to come from behind to win. Johnny Rizzo, Columbus left-fielder, hit safely in both games to run his consecutive game hitting streak to 33.

Louisville took both games from Minneapolis, winning the first 5 to 4 and the nightcap 5 to 1. Dick Bass won his fifth victory of the season by outpitching Wagner in the opener, while Fred Shaffer hurled four-hit ball to account for the other half of the bill.

the place and Matheson went out for four in each contest. Sigafos, on the sick list for some time, had three hits in four trips in the opener.

Indianapolis and St. Paul divided their twin bill, the Saints taking the opener 7 to 4, largely through third inning, four-run offense.

Rance Page's fine pitching resulted in a 7 to 2 Tribe win in the nightcap.

ROCKEFELLER, 97, DIES IN FLORIDA

Lacked 26 Months of Attaining Ambition To Live 100 Years

dition to warrant a special trip to Florida.
Saturday night, he lapsed into a slight coma. His heart pulsed with a slowly weakening tempo.
At 2 a. m., he roused to murmur something to his valet of 20 years, John H. York.
"H asked to be raised higher in his bed, and when it was done, he whispered thinly:
"There, that's better."
So far as is known, they were his last words. He closed his eyes, and two hours later breathed his last.
Death Signalled to World
His death was formally signalled to the outside world at 8:30 a. m.
when a red-haired youth employed on the estate raised a worn American flag to the top of the flagpole at "The Casements" and then lowered it to halfmast.
Beyond the statement that his estate was "relatively small," no immediate information was forthcoming as to how much the one-time multimillionaire retained for his own personal needs.
He had disposed of most of his vast holdings, however, as early as 1922. In that year, according to a report to congress, he paid a tax of only $12,063.03 on his net income.
Almost a legendary figure to generations which have grown up in the past 30 or 40 years, the "modern Midas" as he was sometimes called, bobbed into public attention with clock-like regularity once a year on his birthday.
Otherwise he lived in quiet seclusion—an almost forgotten anachronism of America's roaring industrial pioneer days.
Yet to the last he clung tenaciously to life. He was supremely confident he would reach 100.
"Then," he said, with a quiet chuckle, "I'll really begin to live."

Wanted to Live
His major concern, in the last two decades, was to prolong his life as much as possible. Physicians constantly checked on his physical condition, watching his diet, regulating his exercise. His habits were clock-like, all ordered with a view to conserving his health.
He traveled with the seasons, spending the winter at Ormond Beach and the summer either at his Lakewood, N. J., home or at Pomona Hills, in Hartgrove, N. Y.
He lived on a diet of at least 75 per cent vegetables. He rose regularly at 7 a. m. and retired on the dot at 9 p. m.
Despite his advanced years, he kept well-informed on current world events, having his secretary read him the newspapers every morning.
The man who earned pennies at 7, dollars at 10 and untold millions at 40, turned all his energies in the last half of his life to giving his millions away.
"I believe it is every man's religious duty to get all he can honestly, and to give all we can," he once said.
He practiced his precept—to a greater extent, both ways, than any other figure in history.
Institutions in far lands benefited to the extent of huge sums from his highly organized benefence—universities, scientific research laboratories, churches, hospitals and other worthy causes.
His greatest contribution was to the Rockefeller Foundation, which received a total of $182,851,480.90.
Born in Farm House
The son of William Avery Rockefeller, a genial, easy-going farmer and peddler of medicines, John Davison Rockefeller was born in a farm house in Richford village, Tioga county, in the Finger Lake region of upper New York state, July 8, 1839.
He was of the fifth generation in descent from Johann Peter Rockefeller, who came with his sons to America from near Coblenz on the Rhine in 1720 and settled in New Jersey.
Young John made his first business "deal" at the age of eight had strayed away from the family farm. The boy "bargained" with his mother so that he could keep the hen's brood of little turkeys in return for finding her. He won her consent, raised the turkeys and sold them—at a neat profit.

He got his first job at 16. Forty-one years later, after reaping a bonanza of "black gold" from the hills of Pennsylvania, he retired
